To Hope Adams,

How that the Governor of the State of South Carolina has said publicly that if we open for business in this state and hire a few employees we do not need a License on Insurance or to follow any local or state law.

That we can just worry about that later on . And if we don't like the way the laws are now or they don't fit our needs. Will Her and the State will change them or write new reg's so that we can keep the employees working.

So let's all find a business that is a little out of the norm get going we can worry about all that stuff later its not really that important.

Just one man thinking.

Thank You; Tim Mccollum

Here is proof that SC lawmakers are endangering the public by impeding Uber

Thanks for the understanding and consideration

Patrick,

Ridesharing helps make cities safer. A new study we conducted with Mothers Against Drunk Driving (MADD) shows just how powerful choice can be: Since we launched UberX in California, drunk-driving crashes decreased by 60 per month for drivers under 30. That's 1,800 crashes likely prevented over the past 2 ½ years.

When empowered with more safe, reliable and affordable transportation options like Uber, people are making better, smarter choices that are making our roads safer for everyone. Learn more on our blog.

To promote safe rides home during the weekend of the Big Game, Uber will donate $1 to MADD for every trip taken on Sunday, February 1, 2015 between 3:00 PM and 12:00 AM ET when riders enter the promo code THINKANDRIDE.

Uber and MADD will keep working to ensure a safe ride is always within reach and drunk driving crashes become a thing of the past.

Sincerely,

David Plouffe
